THE J. E. JONES LETTER

SHIP SUBSIDY

The ship subsidy bill will be the backbone of the legislative program in the House of Representatives during the coming weeks. Members of Congress had their way in keeping the subsidy legislation out of the way prior to election. It is now stated at the White House that the power of the Administration has been enlisted in support of ship subsidy, and despite all opposition, preferential rights are demanded for the bill in the House. What the fate of the measure will be no one can tell; but in some of the states a good deal of attention was given to this subject during the campaign, and the burden of talk in a number of the "progressive" states of the middle west and the far west indicated tremendous opposition. There are political prophets and sons of prophets in Washington, and their predictions are freely given with reference to all political topics. These Wise Acres foresee "defeat" or "qualify," or "doubtful," when the fate of ship subsidy is up.

The United States government is operating a very extensive shipping business, and with not very good success. Because it is constantly running behind, it is proposed to sell all ships, and to give certain bonuses, or mail contracts, to private owners who will operate ships. A subsidy arranged in this manner will be as expensive for the government as the payment of the present losses in public operation. The hope of success for the subsidy scheme is that private ownership will develop a great export and import business that will result to the benefit of the United States. Members of the Administration point out that the government cannot use competitive methods that are essential to getting a full share of business for United States ships; and the many restrictions, including the seamen's wages, prohibition, etc., are indicated as placing the present method of ship operation to a distinct disadvantage as compared with private operation.

The ship subsidy legislation naturally originates in the House, because that branch of Congress has the first say regarding bills freighted with appropriation provisions. It is not likely that the House will divide entirely along party political lines on the ship subsidy question, since it may be regarded to a large extent as an economic question. Should its friends succeed in getting it through the House it is hard to say what its fate may be in the Senate, where a lack of political unity and the very nature of the bill would most likely prevent the drawing of strict party lines. It is calculated that a ship subsidy would tax the federal treasury about $50,000,000 a year. This is the sum that the Shipping Board is now running behind in operating the United States boats.

THE "HURRY SEASON" FOR CONGRESS

There are a lot of people around Washington who are having dreams that Congress will "hurry up" with the budget and the appropriation bills and pass them all before March 4, at which time the session will adjourn until the fall of 1923.

Measures besides the appropriation bills to come before Congress will include the soldiers' bonus, the proposed farm credit legislation, possible consideration of impeachment proceedings against Attorney Gen. Daugherty, and many other things that are time consumers. Proposed amendment of the Elkhorn railroad law looks large on the professional horizon, and if railmen up, there is bound to be a fight. There is no reason to doubt that Congress will move any faster this year than in other years, or that it will have less to do. This points very plainly to the inevitable continuation of Congress until the last of June. More probably political problems, including the prohibition issue, will hold Congress in session most of next summer.

BUSINESS WORLD FORMS A COURT
Political governments fiddle and fuss about problems of a world court, arbitration of international disputes, shipping, bonds and labor laws, the league of nations, disarmament and treaties. In striking contrast to all this it is interesting to note how the business and financial interests of the world get together on vital international matters. During the early part of this month the International Chamber of Commerce perfected a plan for a board of arbitration of business disputes. Twenty-seven countries are participating, and each country will have members on the board. There are nine in the United States, and they are headed by Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of the General

ITEMS OF INTEREST FROM RUMFORD

The old footbridge across the Androscoggin River at Rumford, the bone of contention and discussion locally for the past ten years, and for the past year the storm center of many a bitter legal battle, has been closed. On last week, Thursday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, the Board of Selectmen, accompanied by town employees, boarded the bridge up at both ends, affixing signs which read, "This bridge is closed to all public travel, on account of its dangerous condition. Per Order of the Selectmen." This bridge was built in 1895 by Engineer George F. Merrill of Portland. Ten years ago this same bridge was boarded up in a somewhat similar manner, but a body of local citizens descended upon it, tore off the barriers, and it has been in use ever since that time. It has also been frequently repaired. Sometime ago the County Commissioners were petitioned to grant the town a highway location upon which a bridge to replace the present structure might sometime be built, and this matter was bitterly contested before the Commissioners. An appeal from the opinion of the Commissioners was taken to the Supreme Court, but was dismissed at the October term. Recently, the State Bridge Engineer, at the request of the Board of Selectmen, came here and examined the bridge. In his report, he has condemned it, calling attention to many dangerous features, perhaps unknown to the general public, and this action of the Selectmen in having it boarded up, followed. A special town meeting is soon to be called to present the matter to the citizens.

The firm of King & Landry have dissolved partnership and E. J. Sheehan, who has purchased Mr. King's interest, has become a member of this firm, which will open a haberdashery shop in the near future in the store on Hartford Street recently occupied by the "Busy Bee" restaurant. Their stock is being liquidated, and being unpacked and marked. Mr. Sheehan, the new member of the firm, recently conducted a produce store on Pine Street.

The body of Miss Maud McInnis, who ended her life by taking arsenic poisoning last week, was sent to Prince Edward Island, her former home, she leaving that place and coming to Rumford about ten years ago, where she has been employed as house girl in the homes of several families, having lived in the family of Dr. H. W. Stanwood for six years, and later in the family of Theodore Hawley on Prospect avenue. She is one of a family of 12 children, eight of whom now survive. The motive for the suicide is given as despondency over non-employment. Her age was 29 years. She has two sisters living in Rumford, Mrs. Peter Ellsworth of Hancock street, and Mrs. Marion Hughes of Pine Street.

Aretas E. Stearns has resigned his position as one of the members of the Board of Trustees of the Rumford and Mexico Water District, and his resignation has been accepted by the Selectmen, who have appointed in his stead Mr. John P. MacGregor. Mr. MacGregor was at one time Superintendent of the Water District, serving for a period of about two years. The cause of Mr. Stearns' resignation is because he felt that there should be somebody in his place who was more experienced in the line of work of the Water District than he was, and could therefore act more efficiently.

The Rumford High School football team of 1922 has just completed one of the most successful seasons in the history of the school. The team amassed a total of 124 points to their opponents, 40, and they met the best teams in this section. No High School team was able to cross their goal line more than once in a single game, the big Helton Academy eleven being the only one to accomplish this feat. Rumford won five games, defeating Berlin H. S., Gardiner, Farmington, Edward Little and South Portland in turn. They were tied once by Mayas High of Bath, and lost to Lewiston High by a score of 7 to 6, and to Hebron by a score of 13 to 0. Following are the members of the football squad who made letters: E. Gallant, M. Lavorgna, A. Becker, D. Jenkins, F. Jenkins, W. Karparick (Capt.), A. Kowalek, D. Fernal, D. Gillie, E. Wheeler, J. Stanzilis, E. Kilgore, T. Turner, H. Hoyt, W. Trask, J. Ferranti, D. Dolan, A. Hatchinson, manager. Other members of the football squad who did good work, but did not succeed in getting letters are: A. Amory, P. Jenkins, T. Jankowski, K. Foster, C. Murphy, A. Cormier, V. Sobol, W. Abbott, C. Eldridge and H. Bonnard.

BOY SCOUT NEWS

Mexico Scouts Held Special First Aid Meeting

You hear a lot about Boy Scout work now-a-days in Oxford County. Do you know what it consists of? You have an open invitation to drop in to any Scout meeting of the sixteen Oxford County Troops and see for yourselves what is going on.

In view of a big Scout demonstration night in the future the Mexico Scouts met in the lower part of the fire hall for an evening of First Aid work. Scoutmasters Wight and Strout, assisted by Executive Perham, supervised the work of the various Scout demonstrators for a period of two hours. The following Scouts acted as assistants in charge of the demonstration: Glenroy Foley, Gordon Williams, Howard Keyo, Francis Keyo, Albert Bronhi, Frank Haynes.

At the close of a full evening's work the Scouts came to attention and repeated the Scout Oath, Scout Laws, and Pledge of Allegiance to the American Flag. A large following pledged themselves for the hike to Half Moon Pond Saturday next.

Rumford and Mexico Scouts In Armistice Day Parade

Armistice Day is past and gone for 1922. Nevertheless it is worth while to mention the fact that the Rumford and Mexico troops of Boy Scouts were present and marched in the parade held under the auspices of the American Legion at Rumford Falls.

The Second Law of Scouting is Loyalty. A Scout is loyal to his country, his parents, and his friends. Loyalty to the principles of Americanism is what the Boy Scouts of America stands for. America first!

Dixfield Scouts on Hike to Webb River Falls

Did you ever hear of Webb River Falls? That's where the Dixfield Scouts headed for when their appetite is poor and spirits high. Harlow's Camp is the headquarters. Five miles each way on foot is all that is required to reach it. A disused camp beside a river is always at a premium where Scouting is in progress.

Eighteen Scouts accompanied by Scoutmaster Roy Fowler made a two-day trip to this point. A "wild time" amply describes the trip. One would suppose that a baked bean supper of gigantic proportions would bring sleep to tired eyes. Never! No sleep till morning when youth and pleasure meet. Pyramid building, catch and pull, boxing, and all kinds of athletic sports kept everyone busy until nearly midnight. Several Scouts registered a great bluff at sleeping but "nothing doing," three o'clock found the majority of the troop talking about breakfast.

The forenoon program was Scouting. Reginald Howard and Burton Dupaul passed their woodchopping tests. Woodcraft instruction and improvised football came next. All too soon came Phil Blaboe's call for dinner. A general camp clean-up followed and then the start for home. Willoughby the "speed king," led the way with a happy, tired troop of Scouts trailing far in the rear.

Dixfield Boy Scouts

Dixfield is an advertising name in itself. Why? For the main reason that in that town they get ready to do something and then immediately go ahead and do it. Scouting as well as baseball is successful in Dixfield.

This is last Friday evening's program. Elwin Howard presided at the short business meeting and Burton Dupaul acted as scribe. Following this came a period of sports supervised by Scoutmaster Roy Fowler. Catch and pull, rock fight, double badger pull, jack knife strain, and several other interesting games were played with great interest. Executive Perham took charge of First Aid practice. The following Scouts assisted in this work: Reginald Howard, Elwin Howard, Burton Dupaul and Paul Jenkins.

Scoutmaster Roy Fowler is the man behind the gun and has Scouting well in hand. The following citizens make up the Dixfield Scout Board: H. W. Coburn, E. L. Stetson, B. N. Murdoch, Erlon Torrey, S. C. Foster, R. Brackett. Nine Dixfield Scouts attended the Oxford County Scout Camp this year. Four of these Scouts took advanced degrees and the others made honorable mention.

Rumford Scouts to Have Meetings in Municipal Court Room
Troop No. 1, Rumford Boy Scouts, are assured of good quarters for weekly meetings through the winter months.

CHAUTAUQUA PROGRAMS VERY INTERESTING

The weather opened very unfavorable Monday morning for the beginning of the Swarthmore Chautauqua, but despite this fact large crowds have been in attendance at every performance.

The season opened Monday afternoon with a talk by the Superintendent. After a few remarks the Popular Operatic Company gave a very pleasing entertainment which was much enjoyed by all. In the evening this same company gave a short program after which Chancellor George H. Bradford gave his lecture, "This Way Up." The largest attendance of any program greeted this speaker. His subject was an interesting one and held the closest attention of the audience.

On Tuesday afternoon the Dixie Duo gave an entertainment of vocal and instrumental music and readings. In the evening they gave a short entertainment before the lecture given by Homer B. Hulbert. This lecture, entitled "When East Meets West," was very interesting, and gave us some ideas of the life and people of Japan, and also dealt with topics of interest today.

A TRIBUTE

10 Osborne St., Salem, Mass.
Nov. 26th, 1922

My Dear Mr. Forbes:

I have just heard of the passing of Horatio N. Upton—and will deem it a privilege to add a word to those already written about our friend. I always thought of him as friendly, cheerful and thoughtful, very considerate of others. Always ready to joke, a good story teller, a real worker, earnest in the church and in his everyday life. Of good courage and ever ready to encourage others, a true gentleman, many might (if they would) be as he was—a real man.

Many hours of my vacation days were passed with him, and never will those happy moments be forgotten by me. It was my privilege to visit your beautiful mountain town in summers now gone, and Horatio helped by his cheerful demeanor to make my visits very pleasant.

Do I remember the evening picnic on "Paradise Hill," the corn roasts, and hay rack parties, the home parties (the real New England farmer kind). The many walks and drives around Bethel and the many interesting conversations. Our friend was there and I a privileged guest.

The world was made a better, a more livable place, because of such men as our friend.

He was an honor to the name Upton, and many might follow and live as he lived if they would but try!

May there be many as good, as there are better! Let us do as well as he did. To my old friend, action, an agency that is a power in the state. The bureau has also built the largest and most successful state electric exchange in the United States. It consists of all rural electric systems in the state, and is a model of cooperative marketing through a central agency. The bureau has also been successful in securing transportation facilities for its members. The bureau has also been successful in securing the best of the state's resources for the benefit of its members.

Francis Torrey Upton.

BUILDING HIGHWAYS IN VARIOUS STATES

Money Made Available for the Construction of Roads Connecting County Seats.

W. C. Markham, secretary of the American Association of State Highway Officials and representative of the American Farm Bureau Federation, completed his work in Washington recently upon the passage of the conference report on the Post Office bill authorizing the appropriation of $20,000,000 for federal aid in road building in 1923, $25,000,000 in 1924, and $75,000,000 in 1925. This bill is a complement to the bill passed last summer providing a scheme for the building of farm-to-market roads which was advocated by the farm bureau. It makes the money available for the carrying out of a system of building highways connecting the various county seats in the states and other important roads. This is known as the seven per cent system in which the state highway commissioners collect out of a system of roads for the states. When this seven per cent system of roads has been improved according to the plans promulgated in the beginning, another seven per cent is added, thus insuring the completion of the projects when once started.

Under the rules and regulations laid down by the United States bureau of roads, which administers the disposition of federal funds, there is included not only plans for the building of finished roads, but the expenditure of money for the proper grading of roads with the building of temporary roads. This expenditure is made where it might be impossible to enter other conditions.

The postoffice bill merely carries the authorization for the appropriation and the appropriation itself for the next fiscal year must not be made by Congress until next December. In the interim between June 30, the beginning of this next fiscal year, and the date when the bill is entered into law, the state highway commissioners and approved by the federal authorities the same as though the money actually had been provided for the carrying out of the project. The approval of the federal government is required for the payment of the proportion of the cost of construction.

The strong feature about this road legislation is that the federal government makes plans for a three-year program. This is of special value because the legislatures which meet only every two years are renewed next January in 37 of the states and they can make the plans necessary to co-operate with the federal government in this three-year program.

Under the passage of the present bill it is estimated that $49,750,000 will be available for the fiscal year 1923, $52,250,000 for 1924, and $157,250,000 for 1925.

Hour Costs Compared

Results of cost account studies on some New York farms show an average cost of $1.12 cents an hour for the years 1914-19, and $1.23 cents an hour for the year 1920. Horse labor cost an average of 10.23 cents an hour for the years 1914-19 and 21.04 cents in 1920. These figures were from farms which are much more profitable than the average, yet horses worked an average of only three hours a day on these farms.

Here's one Bethel man's experience. Let D. B. Hall, farmer, Hall St., tell it. He says: "I have always received good satisfaction through the use of Doan's Kidney Pills and recommend them to anyone in need of a reliable kidney medicine. In my line of work, I have a good deal of stooping and straining work and it's hard on the back and kidneys. My back at times, has ached so I couldn't keep on my feet and had to sit down to rest. My kidneys acted irregularly. Whenever I feel any of these symptoms coming on, I go to Bosserman's Drug Store for Doan's Kidney Pills. I use them until this trouble leaves and Doan's never fail."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Hall had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y. Adv.

NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICERS FOR REGULAR ARMY

Whatever else may be said of the attitude of Congress toward the Army, it must be admitted that in the past it has as a rule been liberal in the way of "saving clauses" wherever Army personnel has been adversely affected. The sole exception in recent years is in the lack of provision for retaining the many non-commissioned officers required by the War Department in its various activities.

Under the law, the number of non-commissioned officers in any grade is determined by a fixed percentage of the enlisted strength. As the latter decreases, the number of non-commissioned officers automatically decreases. As a result of the reduction in enlisted strength from 280,000 to 125,000, the number of non-commissioned officers authorized has decreased more the 50 per cent. Some of the reduction has already been effected by death, discharge, retirement and other service causes, but there still remains a large number who must be demoted shortly unless some measure of relief is obtained.

A bill to this end has been prepared by the War Department and submitted to Congress. Briefly, this bill provides for a slight increase in the percentages of the various grades of non-commissioned officers and will operate to save some 1600 of those occupying the higher grades from demotion.

Aside from the obvious injustice to a body of valuable and deserving men, the matter involves another important consideration. A large number of these men are required for duty as instructors with units of the National Guard.

the Organized Reserves and the Reserve Officers' Training Corps. As such, they are required to live under conditions approximating those of civil life. Moreover, in many cases, such an instructor is the sole representative of the Army in the community in which he is serving and, in consequence, must be a man of more than average professional ability and personal qualities, all of which points to the necessity as well as the desirability of giving them rank and pay commensurate with their responsibilities and with the demands which their service makes upon them.

With each decrease in the size of the Regular Army, the National Guard, the Organized Reserves and the Reserve Officers' Training Corps loom increasingly important in our scheme of defense, and their effective development becomes correspondingly a matter of concern to the country. These non-commissioned officers play an important part in this development and are entitled to consideration accordingly.

That they were neglected in the first place is doubtless due to an oversight on the part of Congress which it will be glad to adjust as soon as the matter is brought to its attention.

Hop-Scotch Ancient Game

Hop-Scotch is a game with a very long history. It is even said that some of the pavements of the ancient forum in Rome, are marked with the same diagrams as those which boys and girls draw on the pavements in our streets today. So Julius Caesar and Nero and all the Roman emperors may possibly have played at that, too! Who knows?

MRS. ALEXANDER BRADLEY'S FIVE-YEAR-OLD DAUGHTER DANGEROUSLY ILL

Here is a little bit of true life put into a letter. Mrs. Alexander Bradley of Danbury, Conn., says: "After 14 long years trying different remedies I have at last found a good medicine—Dr. True's Elix-ir."

"I was nearly discouraged. I was giving the oldest girl something nearly every night, but now I keep a bottle of Dr. True's Elix-ir handy, and only give it occasionally. I have tried so many things but now as soon as I see signs of worms I give Dr. True's Elix-ir for quick relief."

"My son, 14 years of age, was always troubled with worms when small and 'Dr. True's' was unknown to me then. I always have it on hand now, as I have another small child. They even ask for more. Now please print this letter so other anxious mothers may know the good results which follow Dr. True's Elix-ir for children suffering with worms and constipation, as I cannot recommend it too highly."

Symptoms to watch: Constipation, offensive breath, swollen upper lip, deranged stomach, occasional pains, pale face of leaden tint, eyes heavy and dull, twitching eyelids, short, dry cough, grinding of the teeth, red points on the tongue, starting during sleep, slow fever.

A great deal of sickness comes from irregular bowels, a vital part of the body. At the first signs of constipation give Dr. True's Elix-ir—for it is the right kind—pleasant to take, with no griping or distressing after-effects.

A well-known New Yorker writes: "While visiting in historic old Plymouth (Mass.), my family became acquainted with your Dr. True's Elix-ir, the True Family Laxative and Worm Expeller. It does all you claim for it in aiding digestion and relieving insomnia and constipation. Please ship me six large size bottles, for mother is in need of it."

—Wm. I. Ralph.
Nearly every grown-up as well as every child needs a laxative. Keep the bowels regular by using Dr. True's Elix-ir. 40c—60c—$1.20. Adv.

Upson Board is the nearest perfect thing for every wall and ceiling, new or old.

A wall or ceiling of Upson Board will never crack or fall. And it can be finished in a hundred pleasing and artistic ways.

Just as Upson Board is being used for every ceiling and wall in the finest new homes, so also it is unexcelled for covering old plaster walls and ceilings.

But do not confuse Upson Board with ordinary wall board. It is harder and stiffer—nearly twice as strong. And, unlike brittle, absorbent plaster board, it is neither difficult to apply nor costly to decorate.

BOY SCOUT NEWS

Through the conference of Selectmen with Judge McCarthy it was unanimously voted that the Rumford Scouts should have the free use of the Municipal Court Room "down stairs" for their meetings as long as reasonable careful usage was given by the Scouts. Commissioner Walter Morse O. K.'d the vote with his best wishes.

Mexico Scouts Hike to Half Moon Pond

Scouting is a great out-of-doors movement. Every successful troop must specialize on a certain amount of outdoor training. It is born in the blood of every boy to roam the woods. To do this successfully he must learn Mother Nature's secrets and treat her decently. Mexico Scouts met at the High School building in preparation of the hike to Half Moon Pond. A good crowd was there and joined later by others. The trip was made on foot both ways. The day turned out perfect and kept the spirits of all on high all day. Dinner was the first important event on arrival at the Pond, and the way good wholesome food disappeared would have shocked anyone who was not accustomed to seeing the art demonstrated by boys.

This was a real Scout hike and dealt with the following phases of Scouting: Cooking, tracking, fire building, use of hatchet, signalling, woodcraft instruction, map work and observation. The following Scouts advanced in their Scout work: Glenroy Roley, Lewis O'Leary, R. Strout, James Dixon, Joseph Penserio, Edward Callendo, Tony Povelite, Eugene Williams, H. Anderson, and Sigurd Anderson. Five Scouts took their 14 miles hike to Frye and back. These Scouts are advanced degree Scouts: Gordon Williams, Frank Haynes, Ronald Newton, Howard Keyo, Joseph McLafferty.

In mid-afternoon the troop prepared for the return trip home. The grounds were cleaned up and fires well drenched. The Scouts came to attention and gave the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag, then started for home. A great time and a great day was the verdict of all.

West Paris First Town to Complete 1923 Boy Scout Drive

The West Paris Scout Board has the honor of passing in the first 1923 Boy Scout Drive Quota. The funds were raised by voluntary subscription and everyone given a chance to give. The largest contribution was ten dollars but many smaller subscribers names were on the list as backers of the Boy Scout movement in West Paris and Oxford County as a whole.

The Boy Scout movement in West Paris has a record of ten years continuous growth. It has proven its value to the citizens of the town. The troop has as its present leader a past Scout reared in the same troop that he is in charge of now. So much for Scouting.

A conference of Sunday School officers and teachers and others interested in religious education will follow.

UNIVERSALIST CHURCH

Rev. J. H. Little, Pastor
There will be no morning service next Sunday.
Sunday School will be held at the usual hour.

The evening meeting will be held at the usual hour.
Although there was no morning service last Sunday, a very interesting Sunday School session was held.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH

Christian Science services are held every Sunday in Orange Hall, Spring St., at 10.30 A. M. All are welcome.

Origin of the Zolder Zoo.
The Zolder Zoo is a result of the bursting of the dykes. This happened in the Thirteenth century, and, in addition to Holland being cut in two, and Friesland being separated from the rest of the country by a large sheet of water, hundreds of villages were submerged and about 80,000 persons were drowned.

PIG POLITENESS

"What is politeness?" asked one of the little Pigs.

"What a question to be asked in the Pig pen!" exclaimed Sammy Sausage.

"Grunt, grunt, what a question!" said Brother Bacon.

"Squeal, squeal, never did I hear of such a thing," said Mrs. Pink Pig.

"I certainly never did," said Pinky Pig.

"The never asked such a question," said Pinky's mother.

"I'm sure none of my children ever did," said Grandmother Pork. "And I have had many, many little Pig children. Grunt, grunt, many little Pig children have I known, too, and none of them ever asked such a question."

"In my whole pig life I've never heard that question asked before," said Master Pink Pig.

"I certainly never have," said Sir Percival Pork.

"I can say the same," said Sir Benjamin Bacon.

"Well, well, well," said Grandfather.

"What a Question."

Porty, "It is the strangest question I ever heard of in all my porky days. Squeal, squeal, grunt, grunt, it is a very strange question."

"No one is answering it for me," said the little Pig.

"No one knows," said Brother Bacon. "That is, I don't think anyone knows."

Suddenly Miss Ham shouted:

"I know. Squeal, squeal, I know! All this time she had kept quiet."

"Miss Ham knows! how very strange!" said Brother Bacon. "Grunt, grunt, how very strange that Miss Ham should know."

"It is very queer that Miss Ham should know, grunt, grunt," said Sammy Sausage.

"Grunt, grunt, I cannot understand it," said Master Pink Pig.

"Neither can I," said Pinky Pig.

"I cannot understand it, either," said Grandmother Pork. "Though I do not know Miss Ham as well as the rest of you—still I, too, am unable to understand how it is that she knows the answer to that question."

"Grunt, grunt, how did you ever find out the answer to that question, and what made you think of finding out the answer to such a question?" asked Mrs. Pink Pig.

"That's what I would like to know," said Pinky's mother.

"So would I," said Sammy Sausage.

"Grunt, grunt, it would interest me to know," said Sir Percival Pork.

"I am very curious to know," said Sir Benjamin Bacon.

"You're all very rude," said Miss Ham, "but then that is what I have been led to expect from Pigs."

"Gracious, grunt, grunt," said Grandfather Pork. "A creature would think that you weren't a Pig yourself to hear you talk."

"You are going to answer my question," said the first little Pig, who had not had a chance to speak, though he grunted and though he had squealed and had tried to attract attention.

"Yes," said Miss Ham, "and I will answer it now. I know what politeness is."

"And though these Pigs may not know, it is quite clear that they do not. I will tell."

Miss Ham curled around her little tail in a proud fashion, and even in his little knickered look it did appear rather fatigued.

"Politeness is manners, or politeness is having good manners. All the Pigs seem to have forgotten."

All the Pigs began to grunt and to squeal, now that of course they had known that.

"To be sure," said Miss Ham, "you are all like many creatures. You forget things and then when some one else tells you, you remember. But the point is that I remembered without any help from any one else."

"But, little Pig," Miss Ham added, "pig politeness is having greedy manners, and these are the kind we think are the kind to have."

So all the Pigs grunted and squealed and waved their tails and said:

"It is true. Miss Ham is right."

To Secretaries of Local Organizations

Why not let this newspaper save you labor?

Labor-saving devices are the modern methods.

They spell efficiency.

Why stay in the old rut?

This is what you have been doing for years—wasting your time and energy in sending out separate notices of meetings regarding your lodge to each member. This means that you have to address from 50 to 100 postal cards or envelopes in addition to preparing the notices for mailing out.

Why not put your notice in an advertisement under "Lodge Notices" in this paper? You could do it for $1.25 and save all that labor.

It's the modern way. It's the way most lodges are doing in the up-to-date communities.

What would be more interesting in this paper than a column or two of such notices? Your members would look for this feature in every issue. And then, think of the labor it would save you.

Just write out one notice and bring it to us. That's all. Simple, isn't it? You bet. Try it and you won't do it any other way.

We are here to serve you and ready to make suggestions.

The Real Issue

By WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE
Copyright, 1922, by the Macmillan Co.

IT WAS near the close of a long session—a session which had lasted a winter and a spring and a summer, and threatened to push itself into the first days of autumn, when Wharton, the western member, who had been in the house five terms, concluded to pack his valise and go home. The campaign was growing warm. Nearly all of the county conventions had been held, and a majority of the delegates elected were instructed for him, which assured his nomination if the three remaining counties in the district did not go solidly against him. He had laid his plan mechanically for a renomination, and if he had stopped to ask himself whether or not he really wanted to come back to congress, he would probably have said no. He was tired, but he did not know why. He thought he needed rest, that he had been overworked, that he was played out; yet his private secretary, who kept the run of the pension business and did his routine work, did not seem tired—the private secretary even had refused a vacation, and it was at the secretary's own request that he stayed in Washington.

But Wharton, the western member, was tired—dead tired, and he pictured to himself the pleasures of going back to his home in the little town of Baxter, where people on the streets who had seen him grow up from a boy and called him "Tom," really were glad to see him. Just before he had left his rooms for the departing train his private secretary had handed him the day's clippings; and after he had been rifling for an hour or so, while he was fumbling in his pockets for a match, they tumbled out in a tight little roll. He idly read them. He was used to unjust abuse and stacks of uncomplimentary praise. The first clipping was taken from the Queen City Daily Herald; it bore a Washington date line, and was introduced by the words, "Special to the Herald." It read:

"They say here that Wharton of the Fourth district, is beginning to feel uneasy. He has received several letters from his district that have convinced him that the Populist cyclone has shaken down several lengths of fence in Lee, Meade and Smith counties. Bill Hentley's strength is said to be developing down there wonderfully. The Hon. Ike Russell, who was here last week looking for a job as receiver of the Baxter National bank, was in close consultation with Wharton three of the four nights he was here, and the 'old man' is wearing a hunted look and is talking to himself. They say down in the Fourth district that it will take more than 'Our Tom' Wharton's bug to explain away his silver vote."

Wharton knew the correspondent and only smiled as he flipped the wadded clipping out of the cut window. There was a short editorial clipping from the same paper. It read:

"The dispatches say that 'Our Tom' Wharton is jiggling in his seat and trying to project his natural body in the Fourth district to see how his fences are, and at the same time to keep his corporeal body in Washington to look after Ike Russell's pie plate. If 'Our Tom' doesn't fall down in his anxiety to keep one foot in the 'bloody Fourth' and the other at the political bake shop, he must be either a Colossus of Rhodes or a 'quadrille dancer.'"

Wharton dropped that on the floor and read another from the Smith County Farmer's Friend. It was long and full of double leads, and "break lines" and italics and exclamation points. It was abusive in the extreme and closed with this tirade:

"Now, let us reason together. Tom Wharton has been in congress ten years; he had been judge six years before entering congress, and county superintendent four years before he was judge. Twenty years has this man been in office; his total salary in that time has been only $70,000. Yet he is rated by the congressional agencies at one-half million dollars. He has banks and railroad stock; he owns mortgages and farms. Where did he get them? His time has been sold to the people; he has been false to every trust; he has voted with the East on the money question; he has neglected the farmers at every turn. He is a garden-variety congressman; he comes out here and haw-haw around, and then goes back to vote with Wall Street. Wall Street knows its friends, and 'Our Tom' is worth one-half million dollars, lives in a mansion filled with hammered brass at Baxter, while the farmer fools the bills."

Wharton knew that the editor of the Farmer's Friend had been a candidate for the post office at Smith City; that he himself had lent the editor money and held his note for $500. He put the clipping in his pocketbook with a sigh, and looked through the other scraps of paper. There were perhaps a dozen—a few of them laudatory to an offensive degree, some clearly bids for money, and the rest a fair discussion of his candidacy.

Wharton's first week in the district was spent at Baxter. He did practically nothing to secure his renomination, although wise-looking men from each of the three doubtful counties came every day to Baxter and went directly from the train to Wharton's house. They all wanted money on promises of "assistance" and each of them told how some "practical" could be "seeing into this" by a little work on the part of the certain third person—always nameless—who would need money for cigars and livery hire. Wharton put these statesmen off, and they went away doubting whether they would support the "old man" or fight him. The congressman's presence in the little town was an event, and he had callers all day long who seemed to need help in different ways. Soldiers desired pensions, mothers asked for positions in Washington for their sons; young women called to see about clerkships; widows, whose husbands he had known, came to borrow money. He was honestly glad to see all these people and, when he could, he helped them; he rarely made an enemy, even though he always was frank.

It was Saturday evening, and Wharton was just entering on his second week at home, he and his friend, "Ike" Russell, were sitting on the southern porch of the congressman's home. Their wives and daughters were in the parlor around the piano, and the two men were at that preliminary stage of conversation in which ideas are conveyed by grunts and monosyllables. "What did Hentley of Smith City want today?" asked Russell.

"About two hundred, more or less," said the congressman.

"Hentley's a thief; he'd spend about $25, and the rest would go into his jeans."

"I suppose so," Wharton answered. "Say we lose Smith county?"

"Well, you say," said his friend. "Did you see Higgins, from Lee valley?"

"He told me last month that he had five fellows who could swing Lee county for $100 apiece."

"Ugh," grunted the congressman. "That makes $2,000 so far, if I come down."

"Well, that's cheaper than you got off before—by several hundred."

Wharton yawned, and the silence that followed was broken only by the tinkle of the cow bells in the valley below the town, and the splash of water over the dam across the river that runs around the village. Occasionally the sound of voices singing on the water or the notes of a guitar would come up on the gusts of wind. The piano in the parlor was silent, and the moon was barely visible under the eastern corner of the porch. The men had smoked in silence a few moments when Wharton said:

"Ike, what is the real issue in this campaign?"

"I dunno, old man; sometimes I think it's the tariff; sometimes I think it's silver; and then at other times I just give it all up. What's your idea, Tom?"

"The congressman did not reply at once; he seemed to be pulling his ideas together for a longer speech than usual. He twisted his gray mustache nervously; he looked askance at his friend, who was apparently listening to the music that had just started up again in the parlor. Wharton went over to the garden hose which was turned upon a shrub, changed its course, came back, relighting his cigar, and said:

"B'Godfrey, I don't know, Ike, I don't know. Do you remember when we used to cut corn at six cents a shock, and go to school down the valley where those cow bells were tinkling a little while ago? We used to sit on the fence of nights like this and talk 'way into the night about what we were going to do?"

"Yes," said the politician, expectantly.

"Yes, and I used to hope to go to congress some day; we used to talk of the old-time statesmen and read their speeches in the school readers—Clay and Calhoun and the great men whose names we knew as boys. They were tall, spare men in swallow-tailed coats and chokers, and hair that looked fierce and statesmanlike. Do you remember the congressman from this district forty years ago; how dignified he was, what a really great man he must have been? He lived greatness every hour of his life. The men who went to the territorial legislature—how superior they seemed, with their tall hats and close-buttoned coats! Ike, do you remember when I went to the legislature in the winter of '70, and came back discouraged and disappointed with the sham of it all—the force and the rings and the schemes?"

Russell would have interjected some reminiscence joke on the young statesman, but Wharton went on as if to keep the thread of the conversation in his teeth.

"Yes, yes, Ike, I know about my plug hat and all that; and then do you remember how I ran for judge and was nominated for congress back in '84 as a dark horse on the three hundredth ballot, and how I was elected and told the people from the box down by the bonfire in the public square that I was going to be worthy of the honor? Ike, the tears I shed there were honest tears, for God knows how proud I was. All these ten years before me, and what a great ten years I hoped they would be. I thought of my plans as a boy—you and me on the fence down in the valley, Ike—and I looked over all the names in congress then—ten years ago I mean—and they seemed great names to me. I could hardly wait to get to Washington to see the men and to be one of them. I was such a boy, Ike—ten years ago."

Each man puffed his cigar in a moment's pause. Wharton lighted a fresh one. Russell thought in so many words: "It's one of Tom's talkative nights."

Wharton took up the thread where it had dropped.

"Here I am, Ike, a flesh-and-blood statesman. I've been in it and through it. I've held as high a place in the organization of the house as any of the great men we used to read about. I've passed a pension bill—and the old soldiers for whom I worked night and day during six months, have passed resolutions against me. I have had my name on a silver bill for which the flat money fellows have abused me. I've led my party through two successful fights. And what is there in it? You know, as well as I do, that it is hollow—all a hollow show. What's the use of it? Why should a man wear his life out up there in that city just to keep his name in print? There was a man named Keifer—an Ohio man, who was speaker of the house once. Who that reads the papers knows anything of him today? Yet he worked his life nearly out to be a statesman. Where are the seconds in the Blaine-Conkling fight? Ike, there's nothing in it at all, ashes."

The politician said nothing; he did not know how the talk was turning.

"They Were Tall, Thin, Spare Men in Swallow-tail Coats and Chokers, and Hair That Looked Fierce and Statesmanlike."

"Ike," resumed the congressman, taking a firmer hold on his cigar, and lightly grasping the arm of the chair, "Ike, what's the use? Here comes a lot of bills and Dicks and Toms and Harrys, who want me to put up $2,000 and promises that I'll be back there working to keep just to go back there. I go back there and work and fret and stew for this, that and for the other thing that I don't care a cent for. I have no heart in it; I feel like a sneak. I have to swallow my pride; I've no ideals; there is no reward; nothing but bigging with a lot of mercenary, impetuous thieves here at home, and peculating with a lot of shrewder slysters of the same sort in congress at Washington. If I go on, I must buy my way in; buy my own slavery. Ike, slavery to the fellows I despise. I know I've done it three or four times, but I kept thinking the end would some day justify the means. But it doesn't; it never will; it's a fraud, Ike, and I'm done. I am going to be honest just for once in my life. I don't have to go to congress; I can be lots happier here—here with friends and my family and—now don't laugh, old man—and—my honor. That's a little thing, Ike, but that's the real issue in this campaign and I'm out of the fight. Let's go in and hear the music, Ike. That's the end of it, I've thought it all over and I've decided."

"Probably most men—at least most moralizing men—would have called the 'old man' weak had they seen him the following Monday making out a check payable to Isaac Russell for $2,000. But most men do not know what it is to worship an idol for a lifetime, and they cannot understand how a man can love his idol even when he knows to his bitter sorrow that it is only clay."

A spellbinder.

"Your wife makes a splendid speech."

"Yes," replied Mr. Mackenzie; "and I noticed she impressed an entire audience the same way she does me. She says what she likes and no one even thinks of talking back."—Washington Star.

SOUTH AHEAD OF THE NORTH

Consumes More Cotton in Mills Every Year Than Does New England

GREAT INCREASE IN CAPITAL

Capital Goes Where It Can Secure Best Returns and South Is Winning

The following special dispatch to the Christian Science Monitor appeared in a recent issue of that newspaper:

Chattanooga, Tenn.—The south is becoming more and more the cotton consuming center of the United States. It is not yet clearly recognized by the mass of the people of the country that the states south of Mason and Dixon's line are now consuming more cotton in their mills than those of the north; yet statistics prove this to be the case, and also that the balance is becoming more and more favorable to the southern mills.

Last year 3,733,000 bales were used by southern mills, compared with 2,730,000 bales in the rest of the United States. The total investment in southern cotton mills in 1922 was $350,000,000. Forty-two years ago (in 1880), it was only $21,976,000. The 1880 mills of that day have grown to about 970.

The rise of southern cotton mills is one of the romances of modern industry. And what is more important, it gives promise of great increase, with an easy possibility of becoming the center of fabrication of cotton for the world.

Great Natural Advantages Several factors make it likely that the south will become the cotton manufacturing center of the world. Unsurpassed climate, abundant water power, a growing skilled population to man the mills, raw materials close at hand, eliminating long freight hauls—mills in the section have many material advantages. These are being recognized more and more by the manufacturers of other sections. Many New England mills are moving bodily to southern locations; many others contemplate doing so.

Last April President Robert Atory of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers addressed the convention of that body in Boston, and pointed out the alarming prospects in this line. He said, "Among other things:

"We have the skill and the capital. But capital will always go where it can get the largest return, and it can move easily. Skilled management moves more slowly, because these men like to live in New England, but they, too, will eventually go where there is the largest opportunity, and they have been going faster than is generally realized."

Southern cotton mills on Aug. 1 numbered 966; there were 957 in 1921, and 945 the year before that. There are 16,232,000 spindles in these mills (active, idle and not completed), an increase of $41,000 over the previous year.

Immense Increase in Capital According to the last census, capital invested in cotton goods manufacture in the principal southern cotton manufacturing states was: North Carolina $248,324,884. South Carolina $248,327,427. Georgia $150,121,479. Alabama $69,872,498. Virginia $33,731,798. Tennessee $21,044,630. Maryland $16,441,093. Texas $10,103,457. Louisiana $7,231,311. Mississippi $5,530,362, and Kentucky $4,107,714.

Increases in spindles and looms in the south has been equally rapid, compared with that of the rest of the country. Figures on spindles show that in 1900 the south had 4,467,000 active spindles, compared with 14,532,000 for the rest of the country. Estimates for 1922 placed the south's spindles at 16,232,000, while those for the rest of the country are fixed at 16,835,822.

Estimates for 1922 give the south 200,000 looms, compared with 445,155 for the rest of the United States. The south increased the number of looms in the last 22 years by 155 per cent, while the rest of the country increased its looms by 30 per cent.

There has been a more careful planning of complete cotton mill properties in the south, with model villages, recreation centers etc. Dirty, muddy streets are being done away with; operatives' cottages are being so designed as to offer greater comfort to the occupants. The modern mill village with its clean painted houses, paved streets, and inviting parks, is a good index of the new industrial south.

The Boat of Life.

The little boat of our life labors in the rough of the sea, and we cannot see out of it. We are lifted to a wave-crest and look out, momentarily, over the troubled waters, happy if we can see, in the distance, the islands, with their fringed palms and mountains, whose summits lift to the blue dome of the sky. Again the trough of the sea engulfs us, and we cannot see. All we can offer is the vision from a single wave-crest: what the next may show, no one can foresee.—From "For What Do We Live," by Edward Howard Oring.

BOSTON MARKET REVIEW

For Week Ending Nov. 16, 1922
Prepared by U. S. Bureau of Markets and Crop Estimates

DAIRY AND POULTRY PRODUCTS

Butter market continues firm on all grades of fresh and storage goods. Buyers as a rule are taking storage butter and as a result there was a lighter demand for fresh made goods. Trading on the whole has been good but holders of butter are not anxious to sell and are inclined to ask a premium on finer lots. 20 score cartons of storage controlled selling 45c. Western extras fresh 45c. Storage 45½-46c. Northern Extras fresh 49½-50c. Cheese Market continues firm in spite of the light demand. Dealers expressing confidence in the present prices and goods are firmly held. Trading was mostly on held York State Twins and Fresh Young America with very little movement on Dalais. Buyers however are conservative and purchases are for immediate needs only. Twins 26-26½. Dalais 26½-26¾. Young Americas 25½-27c. Eggs—holding firm on the top grades of fresh which are comparatively short and wanted. Ordinary receipts 44-45c. Firsts 45-46c. Extra firsts 45-46c. Extras 43-44c. There is a considerable better feeling evident on storage eggs and the movement is fair. Demand in mostly for finer packs of Aprils. Refrigerator firsts 29-29½. Extra firsts 30-30½. Extras 31-31½. Some late summer eggs (July and August) selling around 26-27c. Crossed poultry receipts continue liberal on both fowl and chickens with the market a trifle easier. Choice heavy fowl (4½-5 lb. av.) 32-34c. Chickens (2-2½ lb. av.) 26-28c with 4 lb. up to 34c. Broilers (2 lb. av.) 37-39c. (2½-3 lb. av.) 32-35c. Live poultry about steady with any desirable lots bringing a premium and selling readily, but poorer lots are moving very slowly. Fowls 21-24c; Chickens 20-22c; Leghorns 18-20c.

Frank Lane, who defaulted 14 years ago after being arrested on a pick-pocketing charge in North Adams, Mass., has been arrested in Newark, N. J.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge expended $3920 in his campaign for reelection according to a return filed with the secretary of state. Of this sum $1000 went to the state committee, $1000 to the city committee of Boston, $1000 to the Lodge campaign committee of Lynn, $700 to the Republican Club of Massachusetts, and the remainder to local committees in Lawrence, Nahant and Chicopee.

A huge summer camp for children under care of the northern New England division of the Salvation Army will be built on the Maine coast at a cost of about $200,000, according to announcement of Maj. Thomas E. Hughes. An anonymous benefactor of the Army is to provide the funds. Children benefited by the army will be given vacations at this camp. Its location is at Christmas Cove, near Boothbay Harbor. The northern district of the army embraces Maine, New Hampshire and Massachusetts as far as the Merrimack river.

Chairman Henry C. Atwill of the public utilities commission and several other speakers from various parts of New England opposed the consolidation of New England railroads with the great trunk lines of the country before the special New England railroad committee in Boston, of which James J. Storrow is chairman. Although there was some divergence as to details, the business men who spoke in the early stages of the hearing at the State House seemed agreed that consolidation would be detrimental to New England industry and to the port of Boston.

Prof. Samuel McComb, the noted Episcopal teacher now of the Theological school in Cambridge, Mass., has taken a remarkable stand in favor of recognizing the ministers of other accredited Christian denominations as true ministers, without ordination by Episcopal bishops. He is said to be the first eminent member of his denomination to take this position, and it is of timely significance because it differs from the recent Lambeth conference positions, requiring reordination of non-Episcopalians in order to make their orders valid in reunion of the various churches.

Iver Carlson, 35, of Providence took one drink of moonshine, and this is what happened, although he did not know it until he landed in the District Court, when he was bound over to the Grand Jury without bail for holding up David Lunnis and robbing him of $5. He was fined $50 and costs for carrying a revolver. To the court Carlson said, in response to questions by Judge Gorman: "I had one little drink and don't know anything about the robbery or the gun, only what the police say. I don't know where the gun came from."

NEWS HAPPENINGS OF GENERAL INTEREST

Items Gleaned From All Parts of New England

The price of so-called whisky has been reduced by Lowell, Mass., bootleggers to three drinks for 25 cents. Liquor officers say bootleggers do business in alleys and backyards.

Nelson Turcotte of Franklin, N. H., has an apple that is 55 years old. In 1867 his mother packed the apple with cloves with the buds massed outside. The buds are gone and the apple has shrunk considerably.

The first albino deer to be taken in the Calais, Me., section for many years was shot at Waff Junction, N. B., 20 miles from Calais, by William Ashford of St. Stephens, N. B. It weighed 200 pounds.

Gov. Baxter of Maine and council have approved rules and regulations as adopted by the state highway commission restricting heavy traffic on certain highways between Dec. 1, 1922, and May 15, 1923.

Maj. Gen. A. W. Brewster will succeed Maj. Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, "the Daddy of the Yankee Division," as commander of the 1st corps area. Gen. Edwards will retire Dec. 1, and Gen. Brewster will take the command immediately.

Joseph B. Kahill, a Portland artist, has been notified that one of his paintings, "Maine in Winter," has been accepted for one of the traveling exhibitions, season of 1922-23, of the American Federation of Arts, Washington, D. C.

Frank G. Howland, who is serving a sentence in state's prison at Windsor, Vt., for embezzlement of funds while president of the Barre Savings Bank & Trust Company, has been given a five days' parole that he may visit his wife, who suffered a paralytic shock at her home in Barre.

The United States commissioner of fish and fisheries has asked that the waters of Round pond, near Stoupen, Me., partly in Washington county and partly in Hancock county, be set apart for 10 years or less for the use of the state or the federal government in the prosecution of the work of fish culture and research.

One dollar to the Chelsea, Mass., Memorial Hospital convalescent fund was the sentence imposed upon James A. Bowen, 27 (colored), of Chelsea in the Chelsea court. Bowen was found guilty of damaging personal property in the form of six empty milk bottles, valued at 30 cents each. The charge was placed on file on condition of the prompt payment of the money to the fund.

Stowe, Vt., enjoyed a big candy boom because of a little brown bear called Miss Delany Mansfield. Purchased by the Mt. Mansfield Hotel Company of a bear raiser near North Woodstock, N. H., she will have a home at the Hurt store in Stowe until next summer. She has been so persistently fed with candy by the children of the village that she sniffs disdainfully when of bread and milk.

Mayor Curley of Boston has requested the park department to inquire into a report that Hagenbeck's zoological garden in Berlin, Germany, is to be given up, and that a large variety of animals will be for sale. Boston may enter the market for rare specimens of birds and beasts if the report is true, and may also endeavor to engage the curator to come to Boston and take charge of Franklin Park zoo.

What is popularly called prohibition has produced bad results in Hartford, Ct., which are daily growing worse. Conditions in general, and women, drinking in particular, are worse than before the 15th amendment was passed. This is a resume of the report of Police Chief Garret J. Farrell to the police commissioner, who accepted, approved and amplified it. More arrests for drunkenness are being made than a year ago and the total number of arrests during July August and September in 1922 is almost as great as that for the corresponding period in 1917, according to figures submitted to the commissioners by the chief.

Canada would have a claim on territory in Maine if the United States enters the League of Nations, declared Sir Andrew McPhail of McGill University, Montreal, in addressing the Transatlantic Society of Philadelphia. Assurance of safety from wars, he said, lies more within the power of organizations such as the society he addressed than in alliances of any kind. Sir Andrew said that whereas the territory in Maine contiguous to the Canadian border was practically worthless to the United States, it could be of incalculable value to the Dominion because of its proximity to the St. Lawrence River, Canada's only outlet to the sea.

Mrs. Hannah Spaulding, of Bakersfield, Vt., who is 101 years old, says that hard work and plenty of it is the recipe for a long life. "More people have died of laziness than hard work. When I was a young girl my mother showed me how to spin and weave, how to make butter and cheese, and all my life I have worked and enjoyed it." She is now unable to make quilts because she has lost all the power in her right hand. She has made 27 quilts for her children, grandchildren and friends, and she wanted to reach the 60 mark and then stop.

FULL QUOTA OF ANTHRACITE RECEIVED IN MAINE DURING OCTOBER AND NOVEMBER

To the People of Maine.
Maine has received her full quota of anthracite during October and November and if nothing unforeseen happens will continue to receive it during the remainder of the coal year and we will follow it up and see that she does receive her quota.

We have been in touch with all dealers in Maine and impressed upon them all the importance of seeing to it that the people in their community secure their proper proportion and urged the dealers to get behind their shippers in Pennsylvania to secure their pro-rata shipments, and if unable to secure same to advise us promptly and in turn we have called on most of the shippers in Pennsylvania and urged them to ship coal to Maine and it has had its effect so that our people who burned anthracite in 1921 should receive their pro-rata share of what the dealers receive.

We have impressed on the wholesale dealers in Maine the importance of taking care of the retail dealers when they sold in 1921 and this has been complied with but with one exception at Portland where the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Company shipped their full quota to the wholesaler and in turn the communities to which they shipped in 1921 have not received their quota and we are demanding that the communities to which they shipped in 1921 be provided for as Portland has received her quota from all companies.

Priorities of anthracite all over the State should be the same as last year.

A. P. LANE, Director.

TWO NEW STATES INCLUDED IN CORN BORER QUAR-ANTINE

Two additional States, Maine and Rhode Island, were recently brought within the Federal quarantine against the European corn borer, in an order issued by the Federal Horticultural Board of the United States Department of Agriculture. The following townships are affected in Maine: Alfred, Berwick, Biddeford, Eliot, Kennebunk, Kennebunk Port, Kittery, Lyman, North Berwick, Old Orchard, Saco, Sanford, Soberwick, Wells, and York, in York County. In Rhode Island the quarantine is made effective in Barrington in Bristol County, and East Providence, Pawtucket, and Providence in Providence County.

Already the quarantine is in force in parts of Massachusetts, Michigan, New York, New Hampshire, Ohio, and Pennsylvania in an effort to prevent the spread of the pest to other sections of the country, especially the corn belt of the Middle West. Federal regulations control the movement of articles likely to carry the pest from infested areas to other States.

According to Dr. C. L. Marlatt, chairman of the Federal Horticultural Board, the presence of the pest in new areas is due to its natural spread during the year. The pest is still limited, so far as is known, he points out, substantially to the old districts, and these districts represent for the most part the original areas of infestation which resulted from importation of broom corn from Europe in 1909 and 1910. The fact that no wide jumps of the insect have been determined during the year, Dr. Marlatt says, may be credited in large part to the quarantine enforced by the department in cooperation with the States concerned, and would seem to justify the continuance and adequate support of the quarantine.

THE J. E. JONES LETTER

Electric Company.

The plan of this movement is simple.
The commercial interests of many lands,
with many tongues, and many interests, fail to function normally because of confusion and misunderstanding due to race methods and principles. Chambers of Commerce and business men's associations presumably stand for the best business methods in all countries. These chambers throughout the world are to be brought into agreement through a board of arbitration, whose membership is wholly international, but in which there is a common understanding that awards will be promptly made in all disputes, and that those who submit their cases will be in honor bound to abide by the decrees.

It does not take a very long program of principles to grasp the meaning of this attempt of business men to do for themselves in a straightforward simple manner, things that the governments of the world have been unable to bring about, though they have been trying to evolve plans and schemes for international cooperation and advancement for centuries.

ARE WE PROVINCIAL DIPLOMATS?

The President of Mexico has extended a fine welcome to 125 business men from the United States who are visiting his country. Press reports commenting on the visits of this and other groups of business men and financiers to Mexico are making a success of his rule over the Mexicans. Apparently he is kind and gentle with his people, and progressive in his methods of government. But Mexico is still isolated from the world because the United States government continues to withhold official recognition, and in the dilemma created in Mexico's international affairs certain money-sharks in New York have gone to the extreme of attempting to attach the public funds of Mexico as a means of collecting private debts. Some years ago when revolutions rocked Mexico the people of the United States looked a good deal of fun at the term "wait-ful waiting," the "waiting" part of which is still in cold storage at the American State Department. The friends of Mexico insist that a country that borders on our own is deserving of better treatment inasmuch as it has succeeded in extricating itself from the mess that existed when Obregon took the presidency.

BOLD BOOTLEGGERS

Riot guns, heavily armed patrols, and a system of admission by cardboard passes, is included in the order of events and procedure at "dry enforcement" headquarters of the United States Government at Washington. Bootleggers have threatened to burn the building in order to destroy the damaging evidence it contains. Another reason for prevention on the part of the authorities is due to information that powerful bootlegging interests of the country have been planning to swoop down upon the building and seize the great stores of confiscated booze that is housed there.
All the wartime precautions have been restored at this branch of the internal revenue bureau. The officials declare that the bootleggers are becoming more aggressive than ever, and they do not minimize the fact that they believe the situation in Washington and elsewhere is filled with dangers. The situation in New York is likewise acute, and the Federal authorities find it necessary to constantly "reorganize" the dry forces in the metropolis in order to maintain an efficient organization.
